

Independent advice on technology evaluation, selection & procurement

At Decision Evaluation Ltd, we have very strong ethical views on impartiality and independence. It often takes in-depth technical knowledge to judge if IT advice is sound when given (or even was sound after taking it). As trusted advisers, we strenuously avoid potential conflicts of interest.

- As members, we work to the ethical standards of the BCS, The Chartered Institute for IT. Our membership is subject to the BCS Code of Conduct: bcs.org/category/6030. A vital part of this is the requirement for impartiality.
- We are not re-sellers of any hardware or software, nor do our normal services include implementing off-the-shelf solutions (although we are sometimes invited by clients to help do so). We do not have subsidiaries or sister companies that are re-sellers or implementation consultancies, so we do not have a commercial interest in how much external help you need to exploit the solution you select.
- We are not tied to any IT suppliers. We do not accept sponsorship from IT suppliers.
- We do not write market reports that are bought by IT suppliers. Our web pages never accept advertising or sponsored links.
- We do not take (and have never taken) referral fees, introduction fees or commissions from the IT suppliers who win our rigorous evaluation process. We do not take payments in kind, for instance free equipment (beyond standard evaluation versions of products available to any enquirer).
- We will never write a client's specification and then be one of the providers that bids.
- Procurement projects typically have four phases: requirements definition, then candidate selection, followed by contract negotiation and system implementation. At the start of phase 2 (and in keeping with BCS ethical guidelines), we declare any interest in the recommendation. Specifically, our consultants and associates may possibly hold investments, such as shares in quoted IT companies. At phase 2, as part of full disclosure, we list them.
- Decision Evaluation is a Limited Company, Registered in England No 900081. Our accounts are published and we go beyond the statutory minimum disclosure, so you can verify our income sources. You can download our accounts from Companies House, or our accountant will supply recent accounts direct and free of charge.
